Some students at Keiser University will eventually be able to call themselves doctors.

The Fort Lauderdale-based, for-profit university has received approval from the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools to offer a doctor of philosophy in educational leadership, the first Ph.D. available at the school. The program will be offered only online.

It's another sign of growth for the university, which now has 14 campuses around the state, including Pembroke Pines and West Palm Beach.

Founded in 1977 as Keiser School in Fort Lauderdale, the college started offering bachelor degrees in 2003 and master degrees in 2006.
